HERE'S WHAT PEOPLE THINK ABOUT BET ON JAZZ

Bill Clinton, United States President

"As a musician and a jazz fan, I am excited by the dynamic influence that your project will have on American culture. This ambitious undertaking will help to broaden the scope and appeal of jazz, further enriching one of America's most important and original offerings to the arts."

Ramsey Lewis, renowned jazz pianist and host, BET's "BET On Jazz" show

"The new jazz channel BET On Jazz will, at last, address a need that has existed in the United States for quite some time. Jazz, which Billy Taylor calls 'America's classic music,' has gone without adequate television exposure and promotion, thereby not gaining the kind of involvement in our everyday exposure that other American art forms have.

"I think the BET On Jazz channel will finally catapult our music - that to now has been gaining popularity throughout Europe, Japan and the Pacific Rim - to a place of respect that it deserves. This is the United States' only contribution to world culture and it should be honored and recognized accordingly."

Wynton Marsalis, renowned jazz performer, composer and educator

"I think (BET On Jazz) is a great idea and it can have a great impact on music. I hope that BET can expose people to what jazz is through educational programs and provide a forum for young musicians to play and be seen by people around the country playing real jazz music. I hope that BET can help to differentiate and distinguish what makes this art form different from other art forms."

S. David Bailey, executive director, Jazzmobile, Inc.

"As one who has been actively involved in jazz almost all my life, this is very exciting news. I want to congratulate and applaud BET for this new service. It will expose a much larger and very diverse public to jazz - America's classical music."

Sonny Fortune, musician

"I am excited and pleased that BET is taking the lead with the announcement of an event that is so relevant to the African-American community and major as a 24-hour jazz network. It seems only appropriate that BET would be so bold and responsive to the community and America."

-more-

Rob Gibson, director, jazz at Lincoln Center

"Jazz was devised specifically to be performed as entertainment and to make people feel good. That this great American artform can now occupy a full-time television network is a logical step in its growth and BET should be applauded and commended for this bold initiative."

Willard Jenkins, executive director, National Jazz Service Organization

"We, of the National Jazz Service Organization, welcome the addition of BET On Jazz: The Cable Jazz Channel to the broadcast horizon; it is a development which is long overdue. It is our fond hope that The Cable Jazz Channel remains true to the entire heritage of this music and serves as a broadcast beacon, an anchor if your will, for jazz on the television airways. Congratulations and always remember, jazz is a national treasure."

Tim Owens, jazz radio/television producer; producer, "Jazz Alive" with Dr. Billy Taylor

"BET On Jazz: The Cable Jazz Channel is one of the best things to happen to jazz in three or four decades. It has the potential to give jazz the exposure it needs and deserves. At last, America's classical music is coming to America!"

Glenn Sabin, "Jazz Times" publisher

"BET's jazz channel will fill a void for those music lovers who heretofore could only hear jazz on an irregular basis on various network and cable television shows. Thanks to BET, there will now be a home for jazz - America's only truly indigenous musical artform."

Dr. Billy Taylor, renowned jazz pianist; CBS music correspondent

"BET's new Cable Jazz Channel is a very important and timely response to the repeated requests of jazz fans and supporters of this exciting indigenous music for a television channel which would entertain and educate a well identified but underserved audience. In 14 years as music correspondent on the 'CBS Sunday Morning News,' I have received countless letters inquiring about just a channel. With the current resurgence of jazz, it is an idea whose time has come."
